agricultural management

entrepreneur agriculture
general manager agriculture

Start a rewarding career in agriculture to support the nutritional needs of our growing society. Agricultural business comes in many sizes allowing you to work as a small family unit or working closely with a large agriculture company. This certificate could unlock your entrepreneurial spirit or assist in the upward mobility within a large farming cooperative.

Where You Could Go

The agricultural management certificate prepares a person to independently start a small niche farming operation providing a rewarding occupation. It can also enhance a person's ability to accelerate an already established private farming operation moving into new product lines or improved business practices. Additionally, it allows a person to participate in the development of best practices at a large agricultural company.

North Central State College will continue to partner with regional individuals, associations, and colleges to advance this certificate to the next level.

What Can You Earn

The average annual salary in the region for an agricultural manager is approximately $27,000.00 not including benefits and bonuses. Of course as an entrepreneur the income could be unlimited.
